DigitalMeeting are very keen to work with businesses nationally and internationally to help them communicate within supply chains in a more efficient and intelligent way, saving significant time and money. Richard Butler, CEO of DigitalMeeting says "SME's have a greater chance of successfully winning business if they collaborate with other SME's to resource themselves and become a more powerful voice. It would seem ridiculous that work go abroad because smaller British companies didn't feel they could compete with larger companies. Communicating with each other is a key element, pooling resources and sharing the business. I would urge businesses who have registered to contact us as part of their strategy for winning business".
